

Links at top will pull information from user location and time to generate content in pink boxes: image pulled randomly from a google image search of location and time (?) in one box while the other box fills with an image or typographic image that is pulled at random from site files.

Each click will add an additional level of boxes that will scroll up and behind the menu bar as they accumulate beyond the bottom of the screen.

Scrolling down will bring the user to a poem or quote that changes with each page refresh. This element should incorporate transparency in some way, reflecting the color of the main body inside the type.

Site information: explaining the source of the images and text (a little) and that this serves no practical function.

TODAY IS / WILL BE / WAS / NOW

POEM OR QUOTE

(NEW EACH REFRESH)

Site Information
some text